Student Journal of the Anthropology Programme,
Royal Thimphu College

Vol. 1, No. 1 (2021)

The Anthropology Programme department launched the first anthropological student journal, 'Jottings from the Field'. This is a student-led journal intended to highlight the research of anthropology students as well as provide an opportunity for interested students to learn the skills needed to run a publication. This journal also provides an important snapshot of how anthropology is developing in Bhutan.

International Day for Disaster Risk Reduction at RTC on 13th October 2021! Royal Thimphu College held a day-long event to mark the International Day for Disaster Risk Reduction with support of the Department of Disaster Management and Fire & Rescue Service Division of the Royal Bhutan Police. The day started off with an exhibition to familiarize with firefighting equipment at the library foyer followed by a guest lecture by officials from the Department of Disaster Management. To ensure the safety of the entire RTC community, a hazard reporting link developed for the Disaster Management corner on the college intranet website was also launched. Students and employees can now report any potential hazards in and around the campus.

The training included a demonstration on the use of fire extinguishers, handling LPG cylinders, checking valve and hose, handling fire hydrant, fire engine replenishing on-site, and drill by the fire brigade.

RTC Launches

The Himalayan Centre for Environmental Humanities (HCEH)

The Himalayan Centre for Environmental Humanities is an interdisciplinary research and educational centre established at RTC this year. The Centre recognizes that environmental issues today are deeply imbricated in questions of human behaviour, structures, values, and beliefs and that humanist and more-than-human approaches to the environment are fundamental to develop multi-being sustainable intelligence and futures. We recognize that the Himalayan region is particularly vulnerable to anthropogenic impacts, and so to potentially catastrophic effects, both for lived ecologies, biodiversity and life within the Himalaya itself and for the over two billion peoples living in adjacent alluvial plains for whom Himalayan gifts, such as monsoons, sediments, and rivers, are a vital life-source.

The Centre focuses on developing new research methodologies to better apprehend human-environment interactions, to study and forefront indigenous knowledge and practices and to bring these in dialogues with the sciences, and to envision and put into practice multispecies ethics and justice. From its base in Bhutan, which is heir to distinctive knowledge traditions in the human-environment interface, the RTC Himalayan Centre for Environmental Humanities promotes research, teaching, and interdisciplinary alliances in the environmental humanities across the greater Himalayan region. It also aims to leverage Himalayan insights to contribute to new ways of thinking and acting in relation to planetary problems.

Alumni Spotlight

Everything in my life has been unfolding on its own since the day I joined RTC as a student in 2013. My 3 years in college were the most memorable times of my life; I cherish these even today. Now that I am a faculty member at RTC, I feel nostalgic every time I walk into the classroom to teach. Prior to that, I was an assistant librarian at the RTC library during which time RTC announced the annual Indian Ambassador Scholarship and I was selected to pursue my Master's in Anthropology in India.

RTC's lifelong learner motives kept me going, and I was able to successfully complete my MA in Anthropology from Pune University in the year 2020. While pursuing my Master's degree, I not only learned how to do well academically but also learned how to be empathetic towards others, and what it truly takes to be a human. Since then, I have always been striving to do my best in whatever little ways I can to better myself and the community I live in. I will always remain grateful to RTC and I am proud to be able to give back to the institution that gave me so many opportunities.”

Tashi Choden
Associate Lecturer, RTC

In May 2021, during the Spring semester, six alumni members who are pursuing their careers in different fields were invited as guest speakers to speak to the final-year students about their experiences on life after college. They shared valuable perspectives on the journeys towards their present careers and also took time to provide information to the current students about career options other than appearing for BCSE. The talk was insightful and the knowledge shared by them provided some food for thought as the final-year students prepared for their lives and careers after college.

International Opportunities

My exchange programme experience was significantly unique and life-changing. I joined Royal Thimphu College as an academic scholarship recipient in 2017. I had always known about the exchange programme scholarships offered by RTC, one of the reasons I was drawn towards the institution. In Fall of 2019, I got this amazing opportunity to go to the USA as an exchange student at one of RTC's partner institutions, Centre College, a liberal arts college in Danville, Kentucky. With field trips organized by the classes I was taking, I visited the states of Alabama, Ohio, Virginia, Pennsylvania, and Tennessee. Every different state gave me a glimpse of cultural vibrance within the USA. My one-year experience in the US was elevated by the special bonds I created with so many friends and my host family who were the kindest to give me a surprise birthday trip to Florida. It was simply remarkable, the American story of my life would always be indebted to RTC.

Centre for Innovative Teaching and Learning

In line with the vision of the College to become an institution of academic excellence and inspire students to become independent life-long learners who are well-rounded, responsible citizens, Royal Thimphu College launched the Center for Innovative Teaching and Learning (CITL) on 29th July 2021.
